Ultimate 6er | Loveland Staples

 On March 26, 2018
 Any Ranking Team I see
 Colorado is synonymous with countless things: skiing, white water rafting, legalized marijuana, green chili, and, of course, craft beer. With the genesis of the movement often attributed to New Belgium and Oskar Brewing in Fort Collins, locales can be lost in the fold. Loveland, Colorado sits roughly 20 minutes south of Fort Collins, and about an hour north from both Denver and Boulder. While smaller in terms of brewery offerings (roughly six), these establishments care how to pack a punch. If you're in town, here are the six beers you should ensure you get a taste of before you leave.

Little Red Cap | Grimm Brothers Brewhouse

Grimm Brothers is one of Loveland's brewery trailblazers, bringing the German styles we all know and love to the northern part of the I-25 corridor. This is a traditional-style ale, meaning you'll be greeted by a frothy glass of copper goodness. It's a well-balanced beer, with a hoppiness that is met by a balance of malt. With several wins at SABF on different occasions, the hardware speaks for itself.

WE ASKED 70+ DENVER MUSICIANS, COMEDIANS AND CREATIVES WHY THEY LOVE COLORADO

Brittany Werges, Emily McCarter and Kait Starr March 2, 2018 2

Lifestyle & Culture

It's really not a secret, but we're big fans of local creatives. That's one reason we teamed up with Illegal Pete's, New Belgium and Channel 93.3 to give any and all Denver musicians, comedians and artists of all shapes and sizes free portraits in honor of 303 Day. All they had to do was sign up and tell us why they love Colorado. Below you'll find the photos that four very talented photographers took (including two of our own) along with short bios and their response to the question at hand.

Check it out and the make sure to stop by Illegal Pete's all day on Saturday (303 Day/ March 3) and grab some deals on food, booze and more (including a breakfast burrito for only $3.03).

READ: A Master Guide to Collectives – For All Types of Denver Creatives

*** Bios and responses are self-submitted by the artists so the words are their own. Big thanks to photographers Danielle Webster, Amanda Piela, Robert Castro and Evan Sémon. 303 writers Kait Starr, Emily McCarter and Brittany Werges for the hours of formatting and Virgil Dickerson for coordination.

About: The Hollow has one definitive goal — to deliver thought-provoking rock music that encourages self-love and mental wellness. The Hollow is a dynamic alternative/art-rock band with a tightly focused sound that threatens to transform the pedestrian landscape of contemporary rock 'n roll. With thoughtfully layered guitars built upon a hard-driving rhythm section, their powerful music espouses beguiling lyrics and infectious melodies that evoke modern rock icons such as Incubus, Thrice and Queens of the Stone Age.

Why they love Colorado: Other than getting all four seasons in a week? There's something compelling about this place. The art. The culture. The kindness and generosity of strangers. There's a magnetism that's so beautifully contagious. Perhaps that's why every member of the band has lived a majority of their lives here. You can choose-your-own-adventure here. Want a weekend away in nature and complete solitude? You're just a short drive away. Want to experience incredible live music and nightlife in the city? Yahtzee! You're already there. The support this city gives to your dreams is something straight out of the movies. Yet here we are...

My Body Sings Electric

About: My Body Sings Electric (MBSE) has spent more than a decade tirelessly building a following for their playfully honest blend of indie, alternative and post-hardcore rock. The band is prepared to release their most ambitious work yet with a new album slated for 2018 mixed and produced by Jason Livermore – Rise Against. A Day To Remember. MBSE's debut full length, "Part 1: The Night Ends" showed impressive sales for a self-managed and unsigned band, reaching #1 on the Billboard Rocky Mountain Charts and #156 for Billboard's National Indie Chart. Their video for the first album single, New Friends, earned a premiere on MTV Buzzworthy. The band has amassed a list of impressive dates on tour with Andrew McMahon in the Wilderness, Nick Thomas of The Spill Canvas, The Hush Sound and arena dates opening for Imagine Dragons, Young the Giant, Grouplove, and Bastille and more.

What they love about Colorado: This badass music scene.

About: Plume Varia is the dreampop/indie-pop project of husband and wife, Shon and Cherie Cobbs. Denver transplants originally from Minneapolis, Cherie and Shon are most comfortable when submerged within a great local music scene. Experienced musicians, writers and performers, they created this project as a way to merge together their deep and independent musical roots in an individual styles. Plume Varia's music is the balance of lonesome forward motion. Cherie's alluring and imaginative songwriting productions creates a dense, refined and consuming sound. They have played House, The XX, Lana Del Ray, Portishead and Wye Oak. They've had acts such as Peter Murphy, Dada, In The Valley Below, Avec Sans Bees, Soko, Rogue Valley, Parellels and many more.

What they love about Colorado: The accessibility of art and culture.

Upcoming show: June 30, opening for Peter Murphy in San Francisco.

To Be Astronauts. Photos by Evan Semón Photography.

About: Equal parts hard rock, punk, and alternative, Denver's To Be Astronauts is a modern band with an abundance of old influences. We are proud to release our first full-length album, indifferentstates. Recorded locally at Modern Art Rock Studios, the album runs the gamut from straight-up rockers like "Oxygen," (the album's first single) to alternative tunes like "Oh Lucy" about ghosts at the Stanley Hotel, to punk tracks that deal with fluid sexuality and our declining social safety net ("This is Not Normal"). To Be Astronauts have played multiple venues around Denver, but our favorites tend to be intimate venues on East Colfax, which has led us to describe our sound as "East Colfax rock." But make no mistake: like our namesake, we bounce all over the known musical universe, and we welcome its continued expansion. Tune in, turn on, and blast off.

Why they love Colorado: All the band members live within a mile of East Colfax and consider the boulevard part of our musical foundation and emblematic of what we love about Denver: it's unique, gritty, it's alive, it is always changing, and it doesn't hide anything from anyone. Colorado is bizarrely in the middle of everything. Just like the continental divide splits the country, Colorado straddles the things that divide us. Everything that is happening in Denver is happening to America.

Upcoming show: April 1: Goosetown, April 7: Mutiny Information Cafe (with Denver Meatpacking Co), June 7: Lion's Lair w/ Dead Country Gentlemen (San Francisco), Flahoola.

Upcoming show: GUEST LIST, March 30 at The Bakery

Whiskey Autumn

About: Whiskey Autumn is an indie pop rock band from Denver, CO. Their latest EP, Ice Cream In The Sun, showcases the band expanding upon the '60s pop stylings of their previous work with synths, hip hop beats, and electronic elements in what is their most confident release yet. Founded by songwriter and multi-instrumentalist Greg Laut, Whiskey Autumn began as a solo project before recruiting bassist Jason Paton and drummer Matty Schelling into the fold. The revamped lineup began drawing from wide range of influences such as synth-pop, '60s rock, and beat-driven electronic. The release of Ice Cream In The Sun has seen the band touring heavily in their trusty van named Bruce, bringing their high-energy live show to audiences across the US.

Why they love Colorado: We love the thriving music and arts scene, the Rocky Mountains, the progressive mindset of its inhabitants, the spastic weather, and the good vibrations of living a mile high.

Upcoming show: 3/22-3/24: Tour throughout Southern Colorado and New Mexico; 4/5 - Denver Public Library (Volume Denver Series); 4/12-4/22: Midwest Tour

Dark Heart Coffee Bar Finally Lights Up in Loveland, Colorado

Howard Bryman | March 21, 2018

Even for experienced builders, a new coffee shop will never go exactly according to plan. The unexpected will come in many forms, and at times some buildout hurdles may prove too high to leap.

For Allison and Justin Real, who were working on a space in Loveland, Colorado, to bring their dream of a multiroaster cafe called Dark Heart Coffee Bar to life, one major electrical hurdle led to an even larger hurdle: a stubborn landlord.

Roughly one full year and $100,000 into the buildout of a space on 5th Street in the small mountain city, the pair needed to contract some electrical work, which is one of only a couple areas the Reals couldn't handle on their own. The electrician encountered some issues, and a month before the projected opening day, city inspectors confirmed that none of the existing electrical work was permitted or up to code, according to the Reals.

"The owner was upset when we compelled him with a letter from our attorney to bring his building to code, and responded with an eviction notice," Justin Real told Daily Coffee News. "We were even going to pay for the electrical upgrade. All he had to do was submit for a new permit to upgrade electric. He refused."

As tensions mounted and the path ahead proved costly and insurmountable, the Reals ultimately took their attorney's advice and moved on, operating a mobile coffee and kombucha cart along the way. A year and a half later, the couple — which has also been building out restaurants, bars, coffee shops, casinos and hotels for over a decade through their custom design and fabrication company Real Industrial Edge Furniture — have finally realized their vision.

"My favorite thing to do is fabricate industrial materials in a slightly more modern way, and this was our opportunity to build out our dream space," said Real, who crafted Dark Heart Coffee with a modern industrial feel. "Our goal was to pull together a beautiful creative space with intention in every detail — 'an exceptional beverage in an engaging atmosphere.'"

Within the 1,200-square-foot space with a 400-square-foot enclosed patio, the Reals provided and helped install the structural steel for the renovation. They finished the bar in zinc and created every accent, including a hand-torched shou sugi ban accent wall. Allison Real hand-troweled lime and mica walls accented with gold leaf and filled existing concrete cracks with gold acrylic. They built their own reclaimed wood tables and steel frames, fabricated brass wall sconces and steel pendant lamps, and more.

Equal attention has been paid to the coffee, which is run through either a Mahlkonig K30 of EK43 for extraction on either a two-group Mavam under-counter espresso system or Fetco batch brew. A pair of Baratza Fortes grind for pourover executed via Fellow Stagg EKG and Fellow drippers. The coffee program is anchored by beans from Portland's Coava Coffee Roasters. Said Justin Real, "We chose Coava because we believe in their commitment and pursuit of quality."

Offerings from other small-batch roasting companies are rotated roughly monthly and are featured mainly as drips or pourovers, and on espresso only occasionally. Said Real, "When we choose a roaster to highlight, we research them to see what their standards are — [to see] if they're passionate and genuine humans, and to see if their standards match ours."

Dark Heart also offers an array of drinks on tap, including two locally made nitro cold brews and five kombuchas, the latter of which, when considered alongside nine more kombuchas in bottles, amounts to what Real said is the largest kombucha selection in Northern Colorado.

Local craft beer and biodynamic wine are also on offer, although it's the coffee that courses most fervently through the veins of these perseverant entrepreneurs — hence the dark heart.

"Someone may want to just get their coffee and leave with zero chitchat, or someone may want to know every detail about our Mavam. We try and cater to every person's individual needs," said Real. "The customers who truly search for quality coffee and an overall amazing experience are who we want to engage."

Students from Marjory Stoneman Douglas High School in Florida have called for a day of dialogue on March 24 to address the prevalence of gun violence in America.

Moore's play looks at one Colorado family that, like so many others in America, is deeply divided by polarizing political beliefs.

"Waiting for Obama" was an official selection at the 2016 New York International Fringe Festival, where it was celebrated by critics as a thought-provoking, absorbing and relevant.

In Fort Collins, the cast will include Laurence Curry, Chris Kendall, Leslie O'Carroll, Drew Horwitz, Maggy Stacy, John Hauser and Jenna Moll Reyes.

Verboten Brewing in 'Brewery Madness' finals

Downtown Loveland brewery faces off against Greeley's WeldWerks in people's choice voting

By Craig Young

Reporter-Herald Staff Writer

POSTED: 03/27/2018 07:02:05 PM MDT

A Loveland beer "team" has charged its way through the March Madness brackets and now is facing a Greeley brewery in the finals.

Verboten Brewing found itself as the only Loveland brewery on Colorado Brewery List's "sweet sixteen" of small breweries in the Colorado Brewery Madness competition, based on the votes of fellow brewers.

"We're totally thrilled and honored that they would pick us as one of the top 16," said Angie Grenz, co-owner and marketing director for Verboten. She said the brewers considered both the beer and the taproom experience when voting for their favorites.

If you vote

What: Colorado Brewery Madness competition created by Colorado Brewery List. Verboten Brewing of Loveland and WeldWerks Brewing of Greeley are in the finals.

When: Finals voting accepted through Saturday.

Where: Beer fans can cast their votes at coloradobrewerylist.com/colorado-brewery-madness-2018.

"It's nice that they recognized us as a place they enjoy coming and hanging out and having a beer," she said.

The downtown brewery then won three rounds against other breweries, gaining votes from the public on the Colorado Brewery List website, coloradobrewerylist.com.

Verboten is stepping up its game.

The first couple of rounds, Grenz put posts on the brewery's Facebook page about the competition. She said the Verboten crew pushed a little harder for the third round, against Centennial's Resolute Brewing Co., asking visitors in its taproom at 127 E. Fifth St. to vote for Verboten.

"This one's going to be the toughest one yet," Grenz said Tuesday. "WeldWerks is very popular, and they do a beautiful job at what they do. We anticipate we'll have an uphill battle."

Added Verboten co-owner Jason Bowser: "It's a friendly competition."

On Monday afternoon, Grenz sent an email to people across Loveland, asking for their support.

"We're soliciting our fans and friends to vote for us," she said. "Now it's down to Loveland getting recognition as the top-voted small Colorado brewery."

"It's an opportunity for the community to speak for us," she said. "We think that Loveland's pretty special, and we'd like Loveland to be known for the quality of its craft beer as much as anything else."

Verboten knocked off Denver's Baere Brewing in the first round and Elevation Beer Co. in Poncha Springs in the second.

Late Tuesday afternoon, the voting was running 59 percent to 41 percent in Verboten's favor, but Grenz said WeldWerks has put on a spurt at the end in the earlier rounds.

Expanding capacity

Verboten opened in January 2013 in an industrial area of central Loveland and moved downtown in the spring of 2016.

Business has been growing downtown, Grenz said — so much so that Verboten has been contracting with Snowbank Brewing in Fort Collins for two years and Grimm Brothers Brewhouse in Loveland for eight months for use of their brewing systems to help it meet demand.

That problem is about to be solved, Grenz said, with the installation of a new 15-barrel brewhouse. Previously, head brewer and co-owner Josh Grenz was working with a three-barrel system.

"We went from being the smallest brewhouse in Loveland to now being the biggest brewhouse in Loveland," Angie Grenz said, although Grimm Brothers still has more fermentation capacity.

"In a week we can brew what we would brew in a month before," said Josh Grenz.

Angie Grenz said Verboten sells about 60 percent of its beer in its taproom, and the other 40 percent goes to bars, restaurants and liquor stores in kegs and 22-ounce bomber bottles.

The larger capacity will allow Verboten to extend its reach, she said, explaining that liquor stores are hesitant to devote shelf space to a brewery that can't guarantee it will provide a consistent supply of beer.

"We'll try to fill our pipeline in Northern Colorado and then expand our sales in the Denver and Boulder area," she said. "We are already down there, but we're pretty selective."

Grenz said Verboten kept its three-barrel brewing system so will be able to do small batches and experimental brews: "We call them weird beers."

The brewery also held onto one of its four-barrel fermenters, which it will use to make sour beers.

Ultimate 6er | Loveland Staples

Bryan Oldham
 On March 28, 2018

Avg. Reading Time: 3 min

Colorado is synonymous with countless things: skiing, white water rafting, legalized marijuana, green chili, and, of course, craft beer. With the genesis of the movement often attributed to New Belgium and Odell Brewing in Fort Collins, alongside the well-known names coming out of Denver and Boulder, it's easy to see how the other locales can be lost in the fold. Loveland, Colorado sits roughly 20 minutes south of Fort Collins, and about an hour North from both Denver and Boulder. While smaller in terms of brewery offerings (roughly six), these establishments sure know how to pack a punch. If you're in town, here are the six beers you should ensure you get a taste of before you leave.

Little Red Cap | Grimm Brothers Brewhouse

Grimm Brothers is one of Loveland's brewery trailblazers, bringing the German styles we all know and love to the northern part of the I-25 corridor. This is a traditional-style altbier, meaning you'll be greeted by a frothy glass of copper goodness. It's a well-balanced beer, with a hoppiness that is met by a balance of malt. With several wins at GABF on different occasions, the hardware speaks for itself.

American Sour with Raspberry | Loveland Aleworks

Anyone who frequents Loveland Aleworks would be shocked to see this as the go-to beer from their expansive and oft-rotating list of beers. They are notorious for a wonderful Belgian Strong Ale, have one of the most consistent IPAs you will find anywhere, I think their most underrated flagship is the Raspberry Sour. With the likes of Funkwerks only a short drive away, pushing out a quality sour that keeps people coming back is difficult. However, this beer is remarkable with a beautiful red hue and tart finish. This was the gateway into countless more sour variations by Loveland Aleworks, and you'll certainly want to pick up a bottle.

Sleeping Owl Stout | Crow Hop Brewing

I'll be honest – Crow Hop is personally one of my favorite breweries anywhere. I've watched their beer go from good to great. So great, in fact, that they will be opening a new taproom in downtown Loveland very soon. Crow Hop's mantra states that "It's About the Beer!" which is evident in their eight flagship beers (yes, eight), accompanied by roughly eight more rotating taps. Sleeping Owl is one of the staples; an oatmeal stout that is strong and robust, with a touch of coffee to wake up your taste buds. This bad boy is nice and dark, and I highly recommend this as your go-to nightcap.

Screw the Pooch Pale Ale | Big Beaver Brewing Co.

Raunchy is the name of the game at Big Beaver. From the suggestive beer names on both the Beaver Teaser and Bush Wacker sides of the menu, you are sure to giggle, blush, and potentially choke on the name of whatever beer you want to order. With roughly 16 options on their menu, you'll be hard-pressed to laugh your way through the names and make a decision.

A staple is the Screw the Pooch pale ale. A bitter start ends with a fresh and subtle hop flavor, combined with a little citrus twist that is approachable for the seasoned beer drinker and the newcomer alike. It's a bright color, standard for a pale ale. Well worth the trek to the more western edge of Loveland.

Thinking of Something Orange | Verboten Brewing Co.

I've talked about Verboten before. They are notorious for amazing beers like their Blood Guardian Imperial IPA and their Killer Boots Caramel Porter, which makes choosing just one of their beers difficult. However, the one that sticks out in my mind is the Thinking of Something Orange, an orange blossom honey wheat made with orange peel. This is the epitome of a summer beer. It's light, easy to drink, but loses nothing in flavor. With the vibrant orange balanced by the strength of the wheat, say hello to your beer of choice for your Memorial Day barbecue.

Tucked away in an industrial park, Big Thompson can be a bit difficult to find. Fortunately for those of us who have found it, we are keen to all of the fantastic beers they have to offer. One of the newer kids on the block is their HazeMaker New England IPA.

I know, some folks may see this and scoff. If you're not a fan of IPAs, NE IPAs, or beer, then sure, this may not tickle your fancy immediately. However, HazeMaker just might be the one to change your mind. This NE IPA is hazy, but has enough translucency to make you do a quick double take. With a well-balanced hoppiness and a bright, grapefruit finish, this is one of the best brews Big T has on tap.

Dark Heart Coffee Bar Finally Lights Up in Loveland, Colorado

Within the 1,200-square-foot space with a 400-square-foot enclosed patio, the Reals provided and helped install the structural steel for the renovation. They finished the bar in zinc and created every accent, including a hand-torched shou sugi ban accent wall. Allison Real hand-troweled lime and mica walls accented with gold leaf and filled existing concrete cracks with gold acrylic. They built their own reclaimed wood tables and steel frames, fabricated brass wall sconces and steel pendant lamps, and more.

"The rest of the world has quite a head start on the U.S. given the outdated regulations our nation still has on the cultivation and uses of hemp as a natural resource," said NoCo Hemp Expo Founder, Morris Beegle. "As we work to modernize domestic hemp legislation and policy, thought leaders and innovators from around the world can show us, today, the many ways hemp can be used in a profitable, sustainable way to build companies and create jobs."

Fashion Alley is sponsored by Hempys, which makes "planet inherited goods" and EnviroTextiles, providing "fabric for our future." Hempys, based in Glenwood Springs, CO, specializes in 100% hemp, 100% made in America products. EnviroTextiles, also based in Glenwood Springs, manufactures and imports more than 100 hemp fabrics from around the world. Fashion Alley exhibitors also include Hemptique, Vital Hemp, Recreator, Satori Movement, and others.

Visitors to the NoCo Global Hemp Village can travel the world of hemp through vendors from Nepal, Poland, South Africa, the Czech Republic, France, Croatia and Germany. The Village features innovative products and ideas from these international exhibitors, including hemp honey, soap, sneakers, and more. Learn about the latest in textiles and accessories, hemp beauty products, hemp foods, along with nutritional and therapeutic applications.

For tickets to the Expo and access to the full range of programming during Friday's Industry Day and Saturday's public events, visit <http://nocohempexpo.com/ticket-sales/>.

Even though they're not around anymore, The Grateful Dead is a band that transcends generations. Music fans young and old have an appreciation for contagious songs penned by Jerry Garcia, Phil Lesh and Bob Weir.

One band decided to put their own spin on some of their songs and that's New Hampshire reggae rock act Roots Of Creation. They have a new album paying tribute to the jam legends titled Grateful Dub that's due out on March 9.

As part of the tour under the same name, they'll be performing at the Greasy Luck Brewpub in New Bedford on March 11 with south shore partystarters Most Dangerous Men Alive sharing the stage.

Before the upcoming festivities, I talked to guitarist and vocalist Brett Wilson and keyboardist Tal Pearson about how the concept for the album started, a few special collaborations, using PledgeMusic to raise money for the album and a couple festivals the band will be a part of in the coming months.

Rob Duguay: This current tour Roots Of Creation is on is named after the album of the same name that's being released on March 9. The album has the band performing renditions of Grateful Dead songs, so how did the idea for the concept come to be?

Brett Wilson: I started way back in the day learning how to play guitar; this had to be around 20 years ago. Grateful Dead's catalog is ingrained in my brain from around that time.

When I play solo acoustic I usually play a Dead cover here and there just for fun. We did a Halloween show where we covered all Grateful Dead songs in a reggae rock style and that was where the idea was born when we did that for our friends at Jerry Jam.

It's kind of an organic thing and we linked up with Errol Brown who engineered and produced Bob Marley's last three albums in various capacities.

We thought that it was the perfect project to do with him because he can get all of those awesome tones and the mixing right. He let us take the songs that we've always loved and flip the script. From what I've heard so far, people have really enjoyed the way we did it in a live setting. It ended up turning into an awesome record with a lot of collaborations. We're really excited to share it with everybody.

RD: Where was it recorded?

Wilson: It was recorded in Brookline, New Hampshire, which is my hometown, at Studio Metronome. I actually got my start interning there when I was really young making coffee, cleaning the bathrooms and working my way up.

RD: You mentioned doing collaborations on the album, which includes the likes of Stephen Marley & G. Love. What was it like working with them? Did you consider a learning experience?

Wilson: With G. Love, I started jamming with him and we became friends during Slightly Stoopid's event Closer To The Sun in Mexico a couple years ago. We had some sushi and some drinks and we really hit it off. The following year he invited me back for a G. Love and friends session and we had a lot of fun and we kept in touch.

Our good friend John Phillips kind of started the process of linking us up for a studio collaboration and he laid down some harmonica on "Ripple" which was really cool.

Melvin Seals, who was Jerry Garcia's organ player, is part of that track too so it was pretty dope to have him on there with G and we became good friends.

Stephen Marley graciously invited us to his Kaya Fest in April that's happening in San Bernardino, California. ... We were working with him and his production company and Stephen did it for the love of it. He loved the music and the vibe and the idea behind the project. We were just happy that he embraced it the way he did.

RD: The band used the crowdfunding site PledgeMusic to raise funds for the making of Grateful Dub. We live in an age where artists are using outlets like these to get fans involved in the making of their work, so how do you feel it worked out for the band this time around and does Roots Of Creation plan on using PledgeMusic in the future?

Tal Pearson: The way that it worked out for the band was really great because it allowed us to stay in contact with all of our fans throughout the process. From the announcement of the fact that we were doing it, to progress reports and status updates. We got to show different inside feeds and parts of the production process that normally wouldn't be involved in making a record.

The fans felt more connected to the whole process and it made it a lot more fun for us due to us interacting with fans instead of being held up in a studio worrying about whether it's good or not. We hit our goal and hopefully the fans are happy with it because I'm happy with it.

Fans got a bunch of added bonuses, too, with posters, early releases and stuff like that. I think it's cool, it allows

Fans got a bunch of added bonuses, too, with posters, early releases and stuff like that. I think it's cool, it allows bands to do what they want to do. It's also different way for fans to get the music while keeping in touch with the band.

Wilson: We dropped an entire live set of these songs that we did with Melvin Seals and a bunch of special guests at Jerry Jam and nobody else but people who contributed to the campaign got that.

We have an alternate version of "Standing On The Moon" that we weren't sure if we wanted to put out the full band version or the solo acoustic version so we ended up just putting out both. We wanted to give our fans as many awesome things as possible as a big thank you for being a part of making the album.

They're putting so much faith towards this because they're purchasing something that doesn't exist yet. It's awesome that people believe in us to that extent.

RD:After the tour, what's next for Roots Of Creation?

Pearson: We have tons of festivals planned. As Brett mentioned, we're doing Kaya Fest. We're going to be at the Arise Music Festival in Loveland, Colorado in August with Slightly Stoopid, Thievery Corporation and I think Pepper is playing that. Hopefully we'll have some more touring in the summer and definitely in the fall.

Wilson: We're going to do a month long trek out to the west coast, then through Colorado and into the Midwest. We'll also be playing with The Wailers at Mt. Snow in West Dover, Vermont on March 24 and it's a free show.

India Most Female Friendly For Pilots

RUSS NILES

As Women of Aviation Week begins this week, the country with the highest ratio of female airline pilots may come as a surprise to some. India has the most female pilots per capita as a little more than 12 percent of Indian airline pilots are women. Finland is neck and neck with India but most other countries are far behind that total. In the U.S. it's 5.1 percent and worldwide just five percent. India was relatively late to the game in hiring females for the flight deck but its airline industry is also fairly new. The first female FO started working in 1984.

Meanwhile, Women of Aviation Week attempts to boost those numbers by giving girls and women firsthand contact with the aviation industry and women who work in it. The belief is that the relative scarcity of female role models has led to the belief that flying is not a viable career option as girls start mapping out their working lives. Many WOAW events are built around Fly It Forward events in which volunteer pilots take girls and women for their first flight in a small plane. One of the largest of hundreds of events planned for this week will be in Loveland, Colorado.

503 N. Lincoln Avenue, Loveland
Open Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday, 10 am-5 pm;
Saturday, 10 am-4 pm; Sunday 12-4 pm

Take a tour of any three of Loveland Museum's art galleries and get inspired. The museum swaps art exhibits every eight to 12 weeks, so guests get a new experience throughout the year. "The Colorado Governor's Art Show's first purpose is to honor this state's artistic talent. There is no better place to do this than Loveland," said John Kinkade, a Governor's Art Show committee member and co-owner of The Columbine Gallery.

For more information about the Loveland Museum, call 970-962-2410 or visit lovelandmuseumgallery.org. For more information about the Governor's Art Show, call 970-670-0335 or visit governorsartshow.org.
